Ph.D. THESIS

Title: A STUDY ON INVESTOR`S PERCEPTION TOWARDS INVESTMENT IN INDIAN DERIVATIVES MARKET WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO BANAGLORE, KARNATAKA.

UNIVERSITY: BHARATHIAR UNIVERSITY.

INTRODUCTION: The Derivative products are added in the secondary market as a new option to an Investors to Invest their money and adequate understanding and knowledge about complexities, risks and returns of derivatives to be given to them and making profit out of derivative investment by small investors are still in the confusion. The derivative instruments are risk reducing tools and it increases an economic efficiency. The Derivative investments are attached with risk, so it is inevitable for Investors to face risk but it cannot be avoided. Indian Investors are less knowledgeable in derivative markets. Investors are more particular about their Investment and returns part, and the adequate returns are based on risk involvement. So, the Investors must be well aware about hedging techniques to manage their risk. The derivative provides best measures to minimize risk of Investment, which allows the Investors to conduct their business smoothly without any failure. Clear understanding about derivative trading and the difficulties associated with the investments, basic mechanism to financial derivative pricing, regulatory framework and other related aspects need to be understood by the Investors.
